What a Scientific Observer Has to Say About California.

ersonal character and was without sig-

Lieut. John P. Findley, while in charge of the United States weather bureau at San Francisco, contributed an article to a prominent magazine on the climatic conditions of California, in which the following statement appeared:

Theoretically, California should furnish the best and most varied health resort and sanitariums in the United States. Within her borders almost every form of wasting disease should find the means of temporary if not find the means of temporary, if not permanent, relief."

This theoretical statement, from an unblased, scientific standpoint, is abun-unblased, scientific standpoint, is abundantly confirmed by experience. The cool and bracing coast climate, devoid of any trace of malaria, extends from the northern part of the State to the extreme south. There is the choice between this cool, humid atmosphere and the dry, warm atmosphere of the inland valleys.

Of altitude there is yet a greater difference. From Plain Valley, 300 feet below sea level, to the upper Sierra, 7000 or 8000 above, any altitude can be selected, and comfortable homes be found.

The peculiarity of an almost rainless summer, during which the injurious germs of animal and vegetable decay are destroyed by thorough desiccation is one of the striking features of Caliis one of the striking features of Calfornia climate.

During the rainy season it is usually too cool to facilitate fermentation, and the result is, except along some of the river valleys, an absolutely pure atmosphere. The ocean winds entering through the several coast openings, are tempered by the intermediate are passed over, and often receive desirable healing properties by taking up the resinous edors of the pines and relevance of the coast range.

The skillful physician, acquainted with the climatic conditions, should find little difficulty in selecting a locality where climate and environment will do all that these agencies can ever do toward the restoration of health. There is enough of wildness to keep the mind constantly engaged, and enough of evillization to satisfy the most exacting. People whose systems are charged with malaria, or are "run down" by overwork, find immediate and in many cases permanent relief in this invigoration climate.
